Insert some imagery to represent the years 1974 and 1992 - when the two key laws were introduced- see the page m05_t05_015 in original course).

Obvious choice would be a desktop calendar showing multiple years but with 74 and 92 to the fore. Maybe something like this: <http://www.istockphoto.com/stock-photo-14266508-calendar20102011.php?at=a224aa9> Bit dull but if it's nice and clean and colours dot compliment the branding then may look ok.

Again, doesn't need to be in boxes, it forms part of the whole background imagery.

There is a large background image to this article which essentially shows 3 distinct elements to a story which are as follows:

1. Women is running because she is late for meeting.
2. There is an unforeseen puddle, which she slips on - Crash
3. End result - badly sprained ankle.

The story reveals as you scroll down the article but we're going to need to find a way of stringing these 4 distinct components to gather so I'm imaging a line which weaves its way between the components. On the line are the various images as well as some text (provided below) which outlines the story.

7 Accordion component - Hazardous substances

Have this woman looking like she is trying to reach the component title 'How high?' Will need to flip it as she is presently reaching for the left edge of page.

8 Text component - How high is too high?

m05_t10_035 - Falls are to blame for the majority of deaths in the workplace, but did you know that a fall of even 2 metres can be fatal.

Even falling whilst standing on a chair or table could have serious consequences.

Perhaps a comment about the use of a ladder instead and also undertake the appropriate training
